Context

In the present rapidly change of the COVID-19 environment, leadership has emerged as a “higher level” paradigm which will influence employee’s future, vision, values and creation of culture of belongingness and the behaviour that will demonstrate regard, respect, and value for all the employees.

Leaders are individuals who successfully spread positive vibes among the community they are involved in and bring a constituency together to share a common “destination” that would initially “inhabit the future”. Those who believe that they ‘can do’ are leaders. Other variables, such as the situation, zeitgeist, context and followers, do matter. Precisely saying, every leader needs talent to navigate these challenges.

The most effective leaders are alike in almost one crucial way. They all inhabit a common virtue that is a high degree of emotional intelligence. It’s not that IQ and technical skills are irrelevant they also matter but mainly as “threshold capabilities”, which are important as entry level requirements in an organization.

Many researchers have confirmed that emotional intelligence does not only distinguish outstanding leaders but also associates them with strong performance. If every leader is effective in all the aspects of the emotional intelligence then he/she will win the support and trust of every person and enthrust them towards the highest level of their performance and effective goal achievement even in the most difficult situations. Many researchers have also confirmed that emotional intelligence not only distinguishes outstanding leaders but is also linked with their strong performance.

The numbers are just beginning to tell us a persuasive story about the link between an organization success and the emotional intelligence of the leaders. The researchers are also demonstrating that people can only develop their emotional intelligence if they choose to take the right road in their life.

Although it is not necessary that people with high self-awareness speak effusively and confession ally but almost all these kinds of people are able to speak accurately and openly– about their emotions and the impact they have on their work.

Thus, we should confidently conclude that organizational climate is majorly influenced by a leadership style and by the way leader motivates, direct reports, gather then happens to use information, make decisions, manage change initiatives, and handle crises. Each leadership style is derived from different emotional intelligence competencies which works best in particular situations and affects the organizational climate in different ways.

It is through the reference of this context that V.V. Giri National Labour Institute, Noida will be organizing online Leadership Development Programme with the main objective of promoting effective leadership among trade Union leaders of our country for having a pragmatic trickledown effect.

Aim

The programme aims for enhancing the understanding about various aspect of human resource development and impart knowledge and skills to develop leadership skills with the following major objectives:

- To understand significance of time management in implementation of affirmative policies & labour laws pertaining to employment.
