INTRODUCTION

The Rural economy in India has contributed immensely to the economic growth of the country. Though the contribution of agriculture to the GDP has declined, still agriculture continues to remain the mainstay of the rural economy absorbing a huge section of the workforce. Rural workers in India constituted 230.97 Million of the total workforce in India and 166 million (56.6 percent) workers are engaged in agriculture and allied activities. Workers in rural India are mostly Self Employed i.e 55.9 percent and the self-employment rate is higher for women workers. About 35.4 percent are Casual Labourers and only 8.7 percent are Regular wage/salaried workers. However one of the biggest challenges which the Rural Economy faces today is the lack of decent working opportunity and access to basic social protection provisions. Further, a vast majority of workers in India are in informal jobs who remain largely unprotected and have limited access to employment benefits and social security. In addition, gender differentials in the participation rates of men and women persist and women tend to be generally engaged in low paying jobs. Though various programmes and policies are formulated from time to time for the development of rural workers, still a lot more needs to be done. In this context, this training programme aims to strengthen the capacities of rural leaders to contextualise their roles within the emerging challenges of rural India. The programme also aims to impart relevant skills and knowledge for organising workers effectively to overcome these challenges.

AIM

The Programme aims at empowering the emerging trade union leaders from rural unorganized sector.
