Online Training Programme on Labour Code on Industrial Relations, 2020

March 22-23, 2021

V.V. Giri National Labour Institute
Noida– 201301
Uttar Pradesh

Context

Labour law seeks to cater to the needs of the industry and the workers which keep on changing with the passage of time. The law also needs to be changed, reviewed and modified as per the contemporary requirements of the labour market. In the context of India, as per the scheme of the Indian Constitution, labour being in the 'Concurrent list' this exercise can be carried out both by the Central as well as various State Governments. Accordingly, a number of amendments have been carried out both by the Parliament and various State Legislatures in many Labour Legislations since their enactment. In addition, a number of incremental labour reforms have also been made by way of issuing notifications. However, recognizing the long-felt need of the industry and the workers, the present government initiated a comprehensive process of labour law reforms by undertaking the exercise of codification of large number of existing labour legislations in four major Labour Codes viz. (i) Labour Code on Wages; (ii) Labour Code on Industrial Relations; (iii) Labour Code on Social Security; and (iv) Labour Code on Occupational Safety, Health, and Working Conditions. These codes have now already been passed and amalgamate, simplify and rationalize the core features of 29 central labour legislations.

These codes are quite comprehensive and seek to address many of the overdue issues of vital importance, affecting not only the industry and the workers but also the economy and the nation as a whole. Hence, an understanding and discussion on the key features of these codes becomes quite relevant and important for all the stakeholders, all the more in the newly emerging labour and employment scenario in the country.
